The major non-ruling parties and Election-Monitoring Organizations (EMOs) endorsed the election legal recommendations; 3 of its 14 main key recommendations were officially recognized and accepted by the NEC, which included those in its revised Regulations and Procedures to ensure neutral, transparent, free and fair elections in the country. Those recommendations are as follows: (1) prohibition of massive transportation of voters to polling stations; (2) amount of time for request for the use of public places for campaigning (the NEC revised its electoral procedures from 7 days to at least 3 days); and (3) roles of NEC polling officials' second assistants on polling/counting day (the NEC prohibited its second assistants from inquiring about voter information on polling/counting day). The NEC was open to political parties and NGOs providing recommendations on its draft Election Regulations and Procedures.

COMFREL's radio program VoC is classified as popular and highly appreciated by national-level stakeholders, including the Mol/NEC, MPs, UN agencies and civil society leaders, according to the COMFREL's evaluation report by an independent analyst Elisabeth Scheper in December 2007. When asked to share their own perspective on COMFREL's programs, almost everyone said FREL's daily VoC "approaches important issues with high news value from different angles". In particular, COMFREL's daily radio program has seen an increasing number of listeners. Nearly 32% of around 8 million voters, based on a survey of the same source, are aware of and listen to COMFREL's radio program and the influence of the radio program draws the attention of politicians on voters' needs and living challenges. Meanwhile, 90% of COMFREL's releases and articles were republished in local newspapers and quoted by radio broadcast journalists such as VOA, RFA and RFI to reach millions of people in Cambodia.

10 local watchdogs were established to lead in organizing public forums, conducting meetings and following up on commune council performance. The formation of local watchdogs was the outcome of the training on how to conduct and organize public forums prepared by COMFREL. Through the forum, local people can raise their concerns, solve local problems, follow up on commune council performance and make close relationships with local elected officials. At commune level, the model of developing grassroots activists and public accountability has changed the way politics is conducted. Citizens are now publicly discussing community issues and are participating in governance affairs.

Almost all of COMFREL's press releases concerned with government and parliamentary watch are receiving more attention and are frequently used by a variety of stakeholders such as political parties, elected officials, civil society and media (both electronic and print media). Meanwhile, there is a notable increase in voters' feedback on COMFREL's Parliamentarian and government watch reports via the Voter Voice radio call-in show. Callers agreed with COMFREL's report findings on elected officials' performance and fulfillment of their electoral platform promises. Most callers claimed that some Members of Parliament did not take care to resolve problems in their constituency, such as had been noted by the people from the COMFREL network. Thus, voters, through this Voter Voice, have appealed to parliamentarians to take effective action in coping with local issues for the sake of voters' interest and the development of the country. In addition, some callers asked COMFREL how to contact MPs and how to get information from them.

COMFREL's work contributed to the increase of transparency and confidence of citizens and election stakeholders participating in the election process with regard to the following key results:

- The report of the European Union (EU) Election Observation Mission (EOM) Cambodia 2008 said, "COMFREL also conducted a Parallel Voter Tabulation (PVT) based on a sample of 1,319 polling stations, resulting in a positive impact on transparency of the elections".
- COMFREL had successfully deployed around 11,000 observers (3,889 female) across the country on the polling day of the fourth National Assembly Election. The short-term observers were deployed at polling stations during the Election Day particularly in 15 major provinces/municipalities. The spread of the observers covered 70% of all polling stations in these provinces /municipalities.
- According to COMFREL's assessment on the fourth mandate NA elections of 2008, there was increased knowledge and understanding of voter rights and responsibilities and democracy. Nonetheless, this did not eliminate or reduce the fear of many citizens; of some potential candidates in some localities, and at certain stages in the electoral cycle. The number of voters participating has increased, due largely to the increase in population; however, the turnout or the percentage of voters has remarkably declined from 83% in 2003 to 75% for this election. This is a worrying sign needing more investigation to establish the extent to which this is due to voter apathy, a sense that the outcome was inevitable, or that various deterrents or impediments played a large part. Meanwhile, an increased number of voters faced obstruction and complicated procedures during registration, voter list clean-up and during the polling period.

Mr. Korn Savang is a COMFREL database officer. By the end of year 2007, he was appraised as a bright COMFREL staff member and ranked 1st among 30 COMFREL central staff members.

Mr. Korn Savang says: "From my point of view, this success results from 2 points. The first point is related to administration. I am always punctual and come to work every day. Even though COMFREL permits all staff members to have 15 days off within a year, I take most of these days to finish my tasks. The later is connected with task performance. I usually fulfill my roles and responsibilities very well in accordance with those mentioned in the database officer's job description. Further, the tasks in terms of special project, survey and Parallel Voter Tabulation (PVT) for the 4th mandate national elections, which are under my control, have been accomplished with praiseworthy outcomes. This success is also from great efforts and cooperation among all COMFREL central staff members."
